CHARITY HORRORS BARED

Bennett's Evasiveness on Primary Frauds Scored by Elderly Leader.

John Purroy Mitchell stood last night at a little green topped table in the quiet lecture hall of the Quaker Forum, 144 East Twentieth street, where William M. Bennett had stood the week before and Morris Hillquit will stand next week, and told an audience of 200 very friendly friends some plain facts in his square jawed, two-fisted way that had the entire audience, man and woman, on its mental toes from start to finish.

Mayor Mitchell's address touched practically every high light of the campaign and of the administration, from the Tammany charge that he is a self-constituted patriot wrapped in the American flag to the temperance and the audience attacked with hand and voice to the fact that he touched them convincingly and well. Even woman suffrage was drawn in by a very ladylike way, and the Mayor smiled and answered to the questioner's obvious satisfaction.

Mayor Answers Questions.

The questions that followed the address found the Mayor willing and ready, and some somewhat eager, to give prompt, full and unstudied answers to one exception: the question as to suffrage. It was near the end of the quiz, which could scarcely be called heckling or at least it was not. The Mayor rose and leaned across the back of a bench three rows from where the Mayor sat. The suffragist—as she was called—asked the Mayor about the question that is interesting so many women.

"I should like to have Mayor Mitchell tell us what he thinks the paramount reason is why men should give us suffrage. Would you care to do that?" Mr. Mitchell replied: "I have avoided discussing in this campaign any issue that did not relate to the municipal campaign. I have already expressed myself with regard to woman suffrage. I voted for the amendment last year. I do not think, in view of the importance of the great issues that are involved here, that it is wise for the candidates to take up questions that are not directly involved in the city election. You will have to excuse me from a general discussion of the merits or demerits of woman suffrage."

Bennett's Evasiveness Shows.

As the suffragist sat down, smiling her thanks, the elderly friend, whose interest centered in the primary frauds, arose to put his question. "A week ago," Mr. Bennett enlarged at great length, greater than on any other point, on the frauds in the primaries. Now, that fraud is a moral or an immoral question, I asked him about it at the end and I think I got only an evasive answer. I asked: "Don't you know that Justice Hughes, the father of the direct primary in this State, is in favor of Mayor Mitchell as a candidate for Mayor?" I didn't get a very satisfactory answer, and I don't suppose it is necessary to ask Mayor about it."

Whether or not it was necessary the Mayor answered, as he had answered all other questions.

"I will tell you what I think of the primary frauds. I hope that every man connected with them will be indicted, convicted and sent to jail. I have already stated what my own attitude of mind was with regard to the primary frauds and have demonstrated it in a court action to clear the atmosphere. I don't know what induced any of the people involved to return a wrong count—unless it was force of habit. I believe, as Mr. Bennett said, that you will find equal, if not more extensive frauds on the Democratic side, the Tammany side, the Murphy side, and the McCooey side, if the ballot boxes are opened and examined, so I suppose that the force of habit obtains on both sides."

Mayor Mitchell was asked what his attitude toward labor disturbances will be if he is elected Mayor, the questioner indicating beyond peradventure that he was opposed to having the city shoulder the cost of policing affected areas. He answered:

"Just what my attitude was last year." Another man—a young man—had read that the budget for this year would be larger by $25,000,000 than the budget for 1917, and that this increase was a form of subsidy in the shape of increased salaries whereby the Mayor and his associates hoped to win the votes of city employees. There was a ring of indignation in the Mayor's sharp toned reply.

Matter of Principle.

"The latter part of the statement," he snapped, "is a complete untruth," and then seemed to recollect that the questioner was not to blame. "I do not mean that I ascribe the untruth to you," he added quickly. "But I do mean this: I do not ask your vote or the vote of any other man in all New York in this election. To me personally it makes not the slightest difference. I am in this campaign as a matter of principle."

Mr. Mitchell got his first burst of applause when he told how he and Arthur Woods, Police Commissioner, had made the city safe for the honest men and the honest business and that a machine gun company of police, trained as a company in the use of such guns, was ready to put down addition wherever it might be found. The second time the audience relaxed to the point where they forgot the grim earnestness of the address and recollected its political and humane significance was when the Mayor depicted conditions that led to the charity investigation.

"That department," he said, referring to the Department of Charities "under the old order—Mr. Murphy's order—was contented itself with providing food and clothing and housing of a poor order for those committed to the care of the department. That is an extremely mild form of expression when I say of a very poor order. Let me specify: Over on Randall's Island there is an institution for the care of feeble-minded children. For more years than can be measured by the lives of most people in this room that institution was a reproach to any civilized community. The conditions that I am about to describe to you existed when this administration took office. There were the children, the feeble-minded, underclothed and underfed, their underclothing changed once in three weeks; children ill of contagious diseases lying in cots side by side with children ill of non-contagious diseases and separated only by a hanging sheet and attended by the same nurses; their heads and bodies alive with vermin; crippled children housed on the top story of wooden fire traps from which there would have been no escape in case of conflagration; the attendants, some of them housed in the garret of an old car barn, without heat in winter, roasted under the roof in summer, in quarters

MITCHELL NOW ASKS FOUR SIDED DEBATE

Urges Bennett and Hillquit to Try to Bring Hyman Out Into the Open.

In another attempt to induce Judge John F. Hyman, the Tammany candidate to come out in the open and meet Mayor Mitchell in a public debate on the issues of the campaign, Mr. E. R. Buckner, fusion manager, speaking for the Mayor last night, announced that if William M. Bennett, the Republican nominee, and Morris Hillquit, the Socialist candidate, will agree to let Judge Hyman to come out in the open the Mayor would meet all three candidates on a public platform and discuss the issues.

"If he does not like the Hiding Hyman," said Mr. Buckner. "The Mayor wants to hear him. The voters want to hear him. He wants the Mayor's job and the voters face to face and tell why he should have the job and why the Mayor should not."

"If he does not like a crowd, the Mayor will meet him, with newspaper men, any time at any place—at Good Ground or at Tammany Hall, or at the home of Judge Hyman, or at the New office, or at any of the other places where his speeches are 'canned.'"

That the campaign is daily arousing greater interest among the people was indicated last night when it became the subject of a church sermon by the Rev. Christian F. Reiser at Grace M. E. Church, 104th street.

"If he does not like a crowd, the Mayor will meet him, with newspaper men, any time at any place—at Good Ground or at Tammany Hall, or at the home of Judge Hyman, or at the New office, or at any of the other places where his speeches are 'canned.'"

Herman Bernstein, one of the most noted speakers in the country, last night came out for Mayor Mitchell and asserted that the Mayor must be re-elected in order to uphold the spirit of Americanism in this city election.

It was announced at the headquarters of Morris Hillquit, the Socialist candidate, that the Irish Progressive League was organized yesterday to round up the progressive Irish vote for Mr. Hillquit. Emmett O'Reilly is chairman, Patrick J. Quinlan, arrested and convicted in Patterson during the mill strikes, is secretary, and Nora Connolly, whose father was killed in the Irish revolution, is treasurer.

Tammany, However, Greatly Discomforted by Latest Development in Campaign.

The revelation that Grover A. Whalen, who is in charge of Judge John F. Hyman's campaign headquarters in the Business Men's League, is a brother-in-law of Jeremiah A. O'Leary and a cousin of Supreme Court Justice Daniel Cohan, the two men named in the seized Von Igel papers who might be of use to the German Government in its propaganda in this country before the United States entered the war, brought consternation to the Tammany leaders yesterday.

Mr. Whalen issued this statement through the Democratic fusion committee last night: "I have always been a Democrat, as was my father, the late Michael H. Whalen. I am not a member of any Irish organization or any society in which Mr. O'Leary is active, nor have I the slightest connection with the movement for the election of Judge Hyman."

Soldiers, Learning Liberty Lessons, Fight On, Says Mme. Breshkovsky.

BORON, Oct. 14.—Education of the soldiers at the front in the meaning of liberty and democracy is occupying the attention of Russian leaders, according to a letter from Catherine Breshkovsky, the "Grandmother of the Revolution," to Alice Stone Blackwell of this city. Many of the soldiers, she says, are "made with the sole idea of liberty."

"While others are inspired and enforced by the idea of liberty, many of them are inspired by the idea of liberty," she writes. "I am sure that the soldiers are not only inspired by the idea of liberty, but also by the idea of democracy."

CRIPPLES AID SOLDIERS.

Children Making Ambulance Pillows and Trench Torches.

New York's crippled children are not claiming exemption from war work. Lane limbs and hunched shoulders and long hours of pain might be considered good reasons for their exemption from war work. But during the past week they have been making ambulance pillows and trench torches, made from tightly rolled newspapers.

Visitors to the school rooms during the busy half hours devoted to the work see happy faces and hear the hum of happy voices. The pillows are made by cutting news to the pieces and stuffing them into 12 by 14 inch bags. The torches are dipped in paraffine.
